Pictured (left to right) are Kevin Dickey, Bronwen Dickey, Christopher Dickey, John Lane, and John Henry Whitmire at Woodall Shoals. "This is where I was skipping rocks with John Voight," Kevin Dickey remembered. His observation was followed by an impromptu rock-skipping contest that was taken more seriously by the Dickey brothers than anyone else. Rainwater beads on the camera lens, left and right.

John Lane, an avid kayaker, at Bull Sluice, explaining some of the details he learned while researching his book about the film Deliverance. Note the surging waters and cloud-heavy skies as Hurricane Ivan rolled in, further swelling a river still in flood stage after Hurricane Frances had torn through the area only a week before.
