

Lyceum Fellows Program

Open to all Clemson students

Why Lyceum Fellows?

The Fellows Program is an intellectual community dedicated to studying the foundations of a free society. Fellows consider the difficult moral, political, and economic questions that demand the attention of thoughtful citizens.

Jim Atwater,
Class of '23

"What I found in the Lyceum Fellows Program, was a richness and depth my other classes sorely lacked. The classes and discussions painted a picture with more than just the broad-strokes of politics and philosophy, but filled in the details that helped me actually understand Western political and philosophic thought."

Earn a Minor

Fellows who complete the six-course curriculum earn a certificate and fulfill the University's requirements for a minor in Political Science ("Political and Legal Theory").

Participate in Lyceum Events

Fellows are invited to Lyceum social events and reading groups, have the opportunity to attend public lectures, take classes with Lyceum Scholars, and connect with academic and professional opportunities beyond Clemson.

Curriculum

- Intro to Political Theory
- Political Thought of the American Founding
- American Political Thought
- Modern Political Thought
