

UNIVERSITY HIGH-RISK TRAVEL POLICY

POLICY STATEMENT

Clemson University requires its students, staff members, and faculty to follow established procedures for University related travel. Travel to and from certain high-risk locations may be subject to heightened scrutiny and restrictions or prohibited. The university provost is authorized to establish the criteria and procedures for the review of travel to and from high-risk locations and to issue travel restrictions.

PURPOSE

This policy is necessary to comply with state and federal law and to help mitigate risks associated with travel to high-risk locations and entry to university facilities by persons traveling from high-risk locations.

OPERATING PROCEDURES

1. The university provost will issue high-risk travel procedures, protocols, and restrictions on travel to and from high-risk locations.
2. Unless otherwise directed by the university provost, the Office of Global Engagement will be the resource for the dissemination of information and implementation of this policy.
3. Failure to comply with the procedures, protocols, and restrictions issued under this policy may result in disciplinary action under the appropriate employee disciplinary policy or student code of conduct and limitations on the ability to access university facilities.
4. This policy is applicable to employees and students engaging in official Clemson University business travel, travel associated with academic programs including university sponsored or approved study abroad programs, and travel associated with university recognized student organizations.
5. This policy is also applicable to persons desiring access to Clemson University facilities coming from high-risk locations.
