My name is Casey Jennings and I transferred to Clemson from Tri-County after two years. I'm a junior geology major minoring in environmental engineering. I thought I knew what I was doing when I first got to Clemson, but I became very overwhelmed my first semester, and I got put on academic probation. One of my lifelong dreams is to graduate from Clemson, so I knew I had to drastically change my study habits and work ethic if I was going to get that chance.

I started going to academic coaching, signed up for Tiger Success, and made a commitment to working really hard to earn good grades. It only took one semester to get off academic probation and I am doing really well now. I know how rough it is to be down that road, but if you work hard and use all of the resources the University, especially the Academic Success Center, has to offer then it is very possible to get back in good standing.
