With new faculty and our largest student cohort in years, we look forward to the year ahead. A year that the role in the landscape architecture program as an assistant professor. I invite you to review their bios below so that you can welcome them to the Clemson Community.

Prof. Amanda Toolan was named the landscape architecture program Director in 2021. She brings a wealth of experience and knowledge in her role, which provides a strong foundation for the program's future growth. As the Director, Prof. Toolan is responsible for overseeing the landscape architecture program, including curriculum development, faculty management, and student support.

Prof. Toolan received her Bachelor of Science in Landscape Architecture from the University of Georgia and her Master of Landscape Architecture from the University of Florida. She has held various leadership positions throughout her career, including serving as the President of the American Society of Landscape Architects (ASLA) and the President of the South Carolina Chapter of ASLA. Prof. Toolan is a registered landscape architect in the state of South Carolina and has worked on numerous projects throughout the world, including the Olympic Village in London and the World Expo in Shanghai.

Research is a key component of the landscape architecture program. The faculty is committed to advancing knowledge and understanding in the field, and students are encouraged to participate in research projects. As the Director, Prof. Toolan is also responsible for maintaining and expanding the program's research portfolio.

In addition to her leadership role, Prof. Toolan is also an active researcher and publishes her work in peer-reviewed journals. She is currently working on a project exploring the impact of urban design on public health and well-being.

The School of Architecture and Clemson Architectural Foundation are proud to welcome Prof. Toolan as the Director of the landscape architecture program. Her passion, expertise, and commitment to excellence will undoubtedly propel the program to new heights in the years to come.
