A Unique Major

Our affiliated faculty come from across the University and pride themselves on the quality of their teaching and research.

Pan African studies allows our students to adapt their major to fit individual interests.

Pan African studies also works well as a double major, complementing areas of study in politics, business, education, the sciences or the humanities.

A major that prepares you for success!

PAN African studies

"do I want to be a marketing associate, corporate trainer...?"

"do I want to be an instructor, recruiter, journalist...?"

Contact us for more information:

Dr. William C. McCoy
Director, Pan African Studies
242 Hardin Hall
864-656-6147
wmccoy@clemson.edu

Linda Tindal
Administrative Coordinator
127 Hardin Hall
864-656-1532
ltindal@clemson.edu

A major that prepares you for success!
The contributions made to society by individuals of African descent are tantamount to the success of culture throughout the western hemisphere and the rest of the world. Their impact is felt in numerous ways: socially, politically, economically, and in familial aspects.

Pan African Studies majors will gain skills that include an in-depth understanding of the cultural, intellectual, and historical experiences of African American or African peoples, knowledge of social and economic development issues, and a broad understanding of cross-cultural and diversity issues.

Students majoring in Pan African Studies will explore the experience of a very diverse people defined by cultural genius, intellectual acumen, adaptability, and a unique fortitude of willpower and determination.

Students will thrive in this major with the full support and interaction of the program director, who is vested in the success of each person enrolled in the program.

Maximizing Your Professional Success

Students who major in Pan African Studies become.....

- Marketing Strategists
- Corporate Training and Development Managers
- Equity and Diversity Directors
- Professional Recruiters
- Arts and Cultural Administrator

AND MORE!

Dr. William C. McCoy
Director, Pan African Studies
Clemson University