Announcement of Doctoral Graduate Assistantship

Clemson University
Department of Parks, Recreation, & Tourism Management

Dr. Em V. Adams, from the Clemson University Recreational Therapy program is currently seeking qualified applicants for a Ph.D. Graduate Assistantship starting in Fall 2023. This assistantship provides a competitive stipend to on-campus students and includes a full tuition waiver (excluding fees). Assistantships are for the 9-month academic year and cover 20 hours of work per week. Assistantships are renewable for 4 academic years for Ph.D. students, contingent upon satisfactory performance. Additional pay may be available during the academic year and summer months to teach and/or work on grant-funded projects.

The Graduate Assistant would assist with the design, data collection, and publication of grant-funded projects related to the prevention of and building resilience after violence, injury, and trauma. Well-qualified graduate applicants should have interest in at least one of the following topics: in culturally affirming healthcare practices, trauma-informed care, intimate partner violence, interprofessional practice/education, healthcare well-being and burnout prevention. Preference will be given to applicants who hold the CTRS credential. Prospective graduate students interested in applying should email Dr. Adams at emiliea@clemson.edu for more information. Students can submit a graduate application at <https://www.clemson.edu/graduate/admissions/apply/index.html>.

A Ph.D. from Clemson University's PRTM Department prepares students to conduct research, teach, and/or work at an advanced level for universities, and governmental and not-for-profit agencies and organizations.
