   Sponsored By: Consortium Faculty and Student Fellows

Discussion

The Breakout Session is sponsored by the Consortium Faculty and Student Fellows. The Consortium exists to stimulate and to enhance interdisciplinary collaboration on research projects supported by external funding. Forum participants are invited to join a discussion between Consortium Fellows and representatives of area schools and school districts to address questions relating to research and schools. This discussion is designed to have implications for ALL HEHD disciplines and research areas.

Join in the discussions as we address questions such as the following:

- How do school administrators and central office personnel see Clemson's research mission interfacing with the research and evaluation needs in their schools or districts?
- How might partnerships be formed to further research activity beneficial to schools or districts?
- How might partnerships be formed to seek external funding for research and development projects beneficial to schools or districts?
- What positive and negative experiences have schools and districts experienced in working with researchers from Clemson?
- How might Clemson improve its relationship with schools and districts in regard to its research activities?

The intent of the session is to open up a useful dialogue, strengthen lines of communication between Clemson and area schools, and potentially to stimulate mutually enriching activities and projects.
