We appreciate the generous sharing of ideas and results by many peanut workers in all the peanut producing states and are particularly indebted to: Drs. Tim Brenneman, Albert Culbreath, Bob Kemereit (University of Georgia); Drs. Tom Islieb, David Jordan, Barbara Shew, Jeff Dunne (NC State University), Drs. Maria Balota, Hillary Mehl (Virginia Tech), Drs. Barry Tillman, David Wright, Nick Dufault, Ian Small (University of Florida), and Drs. Austin Hagan and Kris Balkcom (Auburn). Previous contributions to this guide from Dr. Jay Chapin (Extension Peanut Specialist Emeritus, Clemson University) are greatly appreciated. Dr. James Camberato, Purdue University, co-authored the fertility check list and has provided invaluable support on fertility issues for many years. We would also like to acknowledge support from the Clemson University Creative Inquiry Initiative, the Clemson University Agricultural Mechanization & Business program for providing student volunteers to assist in collecting peanut digging losses, and Amadas Industries for providing equipment and engineering support for the Clemson Precision Agriculture Research and Extension program.

Finally, and most importantly, we gratefully acknowledge the support of S. C. peanut growers for peanut Extension and applied research through the South Carolina Peanut Board and research support through the National Peanut Board.
