Comments

- 1 This statement "Faculty in each Division will maintain Division Guidelines for Promotion and Tenure; the guidelines shall be approved by the majority faculty of the division." is not necessarily problematic but perhaps when I see the TPR documents, I will be have more thoughts. Perhaps since this sentence deals with TPR, it should be deleted from the School Bylaws? I'm not really sure.
- 1 Since the Coordinator of the Faculty of Instruction and the Division Chairs perform the annual evaluations (even though the school director finalizes them), I would interpret the people being in those positions being administrative faculty, and only regular faculty can be administrative faculty. It may be that everything is fine, but I do not see clarity for restrictions to these positions.
- 1 If in fact the Coordinator of the Faculty of Instruction and the Division Chairs are administrative faculty, they are academic administrators reporting to a School Director. Using the analogy between department chairs and school directors, and if these people are all in fact administrative faculty, the searches for them are all subject to guidance in the Faculty Manual (CHAPTERVIII, E.3). I believe this is especially true for Division chairs, since they serve at the pleasure of the School director.
- 1 Committee structure for TPR, PTR and RP committees and the processes for all belong in the TPR document (only) because of the difference in document approvals.
